Not illustrated. 1851 Excerpt: .direct witness of the Spirit so plainly taught in the 8th of Romans; and adducing only the indirect. How much better are both. FROM T. B. PETERSON, PHILADELPHIA. 2S. Adventures in Africa. By Major W. Cornwallis Harris: of the Hon. East India Company s Engineers. Books on Africa are attracting great attention amongst the reading public, and must continue to do so, from the limited knowledge we possess of that continent, and the yet savage life and pursuits of its inhabitants. One with tolerable advantages could scarcely write on such a theme without giving pleasure, even if his details should want the authentication which accuracy requires. Major Harris records the results of an official tour; and describes the scenes of his visit with a captivating vivacity. We have scarcely ever met with more sparkling and even gorgeous pictures than everywhere adorn his narrative. The only damper which the reader feels is the melancholy degradation of African character which he is obliged to witness. FROM THE REV. DR. EARLY, RICHMOND. 29. The Dairyman s Daughter; an authentic narrative. By Rev. Legh Richmond. With an introduction, by Rev. Thos. O. Summers, D. D. Little did Elizabeth Wallbridge imagine the world-wide notoriety which awaited her, or Legh Richmond the unparalleled popularity of his simple story of the Dairyman s Daughter. But neither of these facts, or both of them, are comparable to the astonishing utility of the most unpretending of all publications. It has not only been read in the...
