A visitor could go about each room and a look at the booklet would tell them just exactly where each piece of furniture, linen cloth, etc., could be had. In furnishing up the house, the home touch was always brought out strong. Little toilet articles were on the dressers in the bedrooms, and clothes were hung in the closets. The idea was to create the impression that it was a real livable house. It was just the human touch that was needed and many a lesson on successfully selling houses can be learned from this. The booklet contained a number of advertisements of different firms who furnished material and furniture for the house and the money derived from this source paid for the cost of the interesting booklet. Every copy went into the hands of an interested party and it was a successful example of cooperative work throughout. We also present with the pictures a plan of the floor arrangements. This plan shows the opposite side of the twin house, both are identically the same, except reversed. 1922 MODERN APARTMENT BUILDINGS The Start of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company s $100,000,000 Building Project WORK has commenced on four groups of apartment houses in the Astoria section of the City of New York in the huge home building program of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. Mr. Walter Stabler, the company s comptroller, informs us that the contract is for total guaranteed cost...
