Not illustrated. 1824 Excerpt: .Russian academician Lowitz.f A false observation being thus combined with a true one, Georgia, and the other Caucasian countries were carried too far to the east by an excessive lengthening of the Black Sea, and occupied what ought to have been the middle of the Caspian, the northern part of which remained in its true situation. Hence, the whole of this sea received an oblique direction from north-west to south-east, and was represented a fifth part more than its real length. D Anville opposed this system of Bonne, and maintained the true direction of the Caspian Sea4 In the nautical expedition in which Gmelin and Hablitzl were concerned, all the latitudes, and some longitudes of the eastern and the southern shore were determined. The observations of these various travellers, taken alone with observations. the longitude of Casbin ascertained by M. Beauchamp, and compared more recently with the numerous journals of French officers who have returned from Persia, seem at last to have fixed the extent and position of the Caspian Sea. Less easterly, more indented, and more bent than d Anville has represented, it still has, agreeably to the opinion of that learned geographer and of Peter I., a direction nearly parallel to the meridian. If the reader will pardon this exposition of the long continued errors and deceptions of mathematical geography, 6 ip which to those not deeply concerned in such matters may be somewhat dry, it is hoped he will...
